

I just started a new game with Winona but I'm clueless about how to power catapults and spotlights with the generators. I've seen videos where once the generator is placed, it shows a range ...

The generator won't be fully fueled once built, unlike the generator. The G.E.M.erator uses any kind of gem as a fuel instead of Nitre, You can socket up to 3 gems in a generator.

Winona's Generator, alongside her other gadgets and the Engineering Tab, was introduced in her Character Update as part of the character overhaul for Don't Starve Together.

Now I know the clear differences between the two types of generators pretty well, like the different fuel sources and vastly different charge time, but I gotta say compared to the original I just don't think the ...

Hey everyone, I took a break from DST in December, so I haven't been following the news. Now I think I'll be getting back into the game; I really liked the Winona rework. But something I did ...

I'm playing Winona and she can't build the generator, it says another survivor knows how to craft this. She can make the catapult and her trusty tape though.

For anyone that didnt know, Winnona's generator energy skills affect generators even when they have crown shards. TLDR the best config for catapult setups is 2 shards and 1 pure bril ...

I might do a Winona X WR78 run with one of my friends, and I plan on making a generator to help him get charges. I want to know if keeping one at the house would be a waste of resources or not.

G.E.M.erators are used to power nearby Catapults, Spotlights, and Teletransport Stations. They can also recharge dropped Handy Remotes, Portasols, and W.I.N.bots. A full G.E.M.erator has a charge ...
