

Low-pressure collapsible containers used in Cook Islands environmental projects

"As a member of our global community, the Cook Islands plays a pivotal role in implementing national legislation to phase out avoidable and problematic plastic products, enhancement of waste ...

While the Government of the Cook Islands has committed to a "2045 Zero Waste" goal, current policy and regulatory frameworks are weak, fragmented, and ineffective. Many alternatives to single-use ...

This initiative is aimed at tackling the environmental and health risks posed by the improper disposal of whiteware, electronic waste (E-Waste) and end-of-life vehicles (ELVs) on Rarotonga.

For thousands of years, Cook Islanders survived not by importing plastic-wrapped packages but by harvesting the abundant resources around them - fish, seafood, fruit, animals, vegetables.

Sustainable Development Plan 2016-2020. The policy outlines five principles that need to be taken into account, and sets out the objectives and policie.

This survey was created by the National Environment Service to gauge community awareness of single-use plastics and understand the needs of end-users to successfully transition to sustainable ...

Recycling in the Cook Islands is relatively advanced, with polyethylene terephthalate (PET) bottles and aluminium cans being recovered from household and commercial collections and usually exported to ...

This project has been designed to increase awareness and reduce the burden of plastics on Cook Islands waste facilities by targeting plastics for reduction and improved strategic management.

Te Ipukarea Society (TIS) and Cook Islands Trading Corporation (CITC) have promoted the use of biodegradable single use food and beverage containers in place of polystyrene containers.

Outcome: 1. Less plastic pollution, healthier environment, and increased use of sustainable alternatives.

Low-pressure collapsible containers used in Cook Islands environmental projects

Web: <https://black-hat.co.za>