

We've tested and compared seven leading third-party monitoring platforms to help you choose the best solution for your solar investment. Our analysis covers pricing installation requirements feature sets ...

As solar energy continues to grow across the United States, homeowners today have more options than ever to go solar -- without paying tens of thousands of dollars upfront. One of the ...

Solar marketplace EnergySage found in its H1 2025 report that as median loan rates climbed to 7.5% on the platform, 38% of contractors reported decreased loan demand as customers ...

There are several different types of third-party ownership models in solar energy, including power purchase agreements (PPAs) and solar leases. In a PPA, the consumer agrees to ...

Third-party ownership (TPO) solar allows homeowners to install solar panels without purchasing the system outright. In TPO arrangements, a financing company owns, installs, and ...

Customers with Third-Party Owned solar are breaking free from dependence on utility energy, and joining the renewable energy economy, with a contract that's more affordable than if ...

While many people assume solar automatically means owning panels on their roof, a large portion of the market is built around third-party ownership models--typically solar leases or ...

Third-Party Owned (TPO) solar is quickly becoming a popular financing method, and in this article we'll break down how it compares to homeowner-owned solar. We've structured this ...

But while many people understand the basic idea of owning solar panels, fewer are familiar with alternative options like TPO. TPO is designed to make solar more accessible by ...

This map of the United States shows which states and territories authorize the third-party PPAs for solar PV, which includes at least 28 states (plus Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico).

Web: <https://black-hat.co.za>